

Breaking Barriers: Funding Strategies to House People Impacted by the Criminal Legal System

Safe and affordable housing is crucial to successfully reentering one's community post incarceration, including effectively combating the risks of post-release homelessness and the related risk of recidivism. This document outlines considerations for seeking and using current federal and California state funding to house and support people impacted by the criminal legal system; examples of communities leveraging various funding sources are included in footnotes, when possible.¹

Why Dedicate Funding?

Housing and related resources for people impacted by the criminal legal system will help end homelessness in our communities, lessen the related risk of re-incarceration,² and improve public safety. No community can make meaningful progress towards ending homelessness without taking affirmative steps to help people impacted by the criminal legal system access stable, permanent housing. Some reasons for this include:

- National and California data show that people are caught in a revolving door between streets, shelters, and jails.³ Nationally, 25-50% of people who experience homelessness have been incarcerated,⁴ and people incarcerated more than once are 13 times more likely to experience homelessness.⁵ In California, 70% of people experiencing homelessness have been incarcerated.⁶
- The need to overcome the deliberate barriers that prevent people impacted by the criminal legal system from securing housing. There are over 1,000 laws and regulations in the U.S. that limit access to housing for people who have previously been incarcerated.⁷ People with certain records are also categorically excluded from many affordable housing programs and face increased unlawful housing discrimination.

- Most communities lack effective programs to help people impacted by the criminal legal system achieve housing stability. This reflects misconceptions and biases based on unsophisticated understandings of the societal forces that have led to mass incarceration.

Funding Considerations

Before applying for funding, it is important to examine what your community's goals are, to plan what sort of initiative will help achieve them, and to identify funding for that initiative. Below are some questions to think through to help narrow what sort of grants you may want to pursue:

- ⇒ Why is serving people impacted by the criminal legal system a priority for your community in particular? Who is championing this population and why?
- ⇒ What does this population look like in your community? Do you have data that can tell you more about what sort of programs might be necessary to help people impacted by the criminal legal system succeed? For example, are people reentering the community after long stays in prison, or are they in a revolving door cycle between shelters and jail? Is there a behavioral health element?
- ⇒ What resources are people experiencing homelessness who have been impacted by the criminal legal system asking for? Do they need short-term assistance, like security deposits and first month's rent? Help with landlord negotiation? Or are longer term solutions needed? People with lived experience in both systems are the experts best positioned to help answer this question.
- ⇒ What gaps exist in current resources and services for people impacted by the criminal legal system? What housing in-reach and document readiness activities occur at local jails and other detention sites? Are warm handoffs happening as people transition between incarcerated settings and housing or homelessness systems? What housing services and supports exist for people coming out of custody after short stays? After stays longer than 90 days?
- ⇒ What are the barriers that exist in your community? What sort of work needs to be done to overcome those barriers? For example, if your community expresses bias against people impacted by the criminal legal system, then you may need to offer some upfront public education or engagement.
- ⇒ What resources do you currently have that you could leverage? Do you already have space you could convert into housing? Do you have other programs with strong landlord relationships? Do you have community buy-in, or support from elected officials?
- ⇒ How strong are your relationships across systems? For example: If you are a probation program, are you connected to leadership in the homeless system of care, and vice-versa? Why are these relationships important to the success of your program, and how can you strengthen them?

Once you have answered these questions, you will have a better picture of what sort of program is possible for your community, and what funding makes the most sense to pursue.

Existing Funding Available

This section provides an overview of the ways in which programs may leverage commonly-used federal and California funding sources to serve people experiencing homelessness who have been impacted by the criminal legal system.

Federal Funding Opportunities

Potential Additional Funding Sources

This section provides an overview of additional federal and California funding sources that may be used to serve people experiencing homelessness who have been impacted by the criminal legal system.

Potential Federal Funding

- American Rescue Plan (ARP)
 - The American Rescue Plan includes more than $12 billion dedicated to housing and supportive services and additional flexible funding to states and localities that can be used to help people impacted by the criminal legal system quickly find and maintain affordable housing.²²
- Homeless Providers Grant and Per Diem Program (GPD)
 - GPD grants are administered through the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs to serve homeless veterans.
- Bureau of Justice Assistance, Department of Justice
 - In 2021, BJA offered a Second Chance Act Community-Based Reentry program to expand reentry services, training, and mentoring.²³
- Office on Violence Against Women, Department of Justice
 - In 2021, OVW offered Transitional Housing Assistance Grants for Victims of Domestic Violence, Dating Violence, Sexual Assault and Stalking.²⁴
- SAMHSA (Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration)
 - In 2018, SAMHSA offered an Offender Reentry Program to expand reentry services.²⁵
- Rural Community Development Initiative Grants
 - Awarded to help non-profit housing and community development organizations, low-income rural communities, and federally recognized tribes support housing, community facilities, and community and economic development projects in rural areas.

²² This Guide from The Council of State Governments provides an overview of eight justice-related goals that state leaders can support with funding available through ARP, including expanding access to housing and supporting youth and people who have experienced or are at risk of domestic violence and sexual assault.

²⁴ OVW, “OVW Fiscal Year 2021 Transitional Housing Assistance Grants for Victims of Domestic Violence, Dating Violence, Sexual Assault and Stalking.”

²⁵ SAMHSA, “Offender Reentry Program.”

- HUD-VASH
 - HUD-VASH combines HUD housing vouchers with VA supportive services to help veterans who are homeless and their families find and sustain permanent housing.
- SSVF (Supportive Services for Veteran Families)
 - SSVF grants are awarded to assist very low-income veteran families residing in or transitioning to permanent housing. Grantees provide a range of supportive services to promote housing stability.

Potential California Funding

- MHSA (Mental Health Services Act),²⁶ CA Dept. of Health Care Services
 - MHSA requires a comprehensive and coordinated system of care that includes criminal justice, housing, employment, public welfare, health, and mental health to address mental illness and delivers cost-effective programs. Eligible costs include diversion, services to persons on parole, and/or discharge services for persons not incarcerated in state prison.
- Whole Person Care (WPC) Program, CA Dept. of Health Care Services
 - The Whole Person Care (WPC) regional pilots focus on the coordination of health, behavioral health, and social services. Funding allows regions to receive support to integrate care for a particularly vulnerable group of Medi-Cal beneficiaries who have been identified as high users of multiple systems and continue to have poor health outcomes.
- HCD Veterans Housing and Homelessness Prevention Program (VHHP)
 - VHHP funds may be used for the acquisition, construction, rehabilitation, and preservation of affordable multifamily housing for veterans and their families to allow veterans, including veterans with other-than-honorable discharges, to access and maintain housing stability.

For additional technical assistance related to serving people impacted by the criminal legal system who are experiencing or at risk of homelessness, please email Homebase's Criminal Legal System Initiative at clsi@homebaseccc.org.
